Notes

This book uses Chinese surnames in both traditional (last name first) and Western conventions that correspond to author preference.

This book generally adheres to the American Library Association and Library of Congress transliteration table for the Romanization of Russian words. Some exceptions are made for proper names for which a different English version is commonly used or the author has used in his or her English language publications. Diacritics are omitted to avoid additional complexity. For Chinese transliteration, we have adopted the Pinyin System.

CHAPTER 1

1. "BRICS 2015," Special Issue, International Affairs (Moscow, 2015): 151.

2. The G7 includes the United States, Japan, Germany, the United Kingdom, France, Italy, and Canada.

3. Dominic Wilson and Roopa Purushothaman, "Dreaming with the BRICs: The Path to 2050," Global Economic Papers No. 99 (New York: Goldman Sachs, October 2003);Jim O'Neill, "How Solid Are the BRICs?" Global Economics Paper No. 134 (New York: Goldman Sachs, 2005); Jim O'Neill, "Building Better Global Economic BRICs," Global Economics Paper No. 66 (New York: Goldman Sachs, 2001); Goldman Sachs Global Economics Group, "BRICs and Beyond" (London: Goldman Sachs, 2007). As BRICs mania spread, other predictions followed; for example, noting that emerging markets contain 80 percent of the world's population and create half of global GDP, yet represent only 11 percent of the combined value of global stock markets, The Times (London) quoted a financial adviser who predicted that "[b]y 2050 the BRIC nations will dominate the globe." Quoted in Cynthia Roberts, "Introduction," Polity Forum: Challengers or Stakeholders? BRICs and the Liberal World Order, Polity, 42, no. 1 (January 2010): 1.

4. Gillian Tett, "The Story of the Brics," Financial Times, January 15, 2010.

5. Robert Hormats was then vice chairman of Goldman Sachs, a former senior government official, and future U.S. undersecretary of state for economic affairs during the Barack Obama administration.

6. Jim O'Neill, The Growth Map. Economic Opportunity in the BRICs and Beyond (New York: Penguin, 2011), Chap. 8; and Jim O'Neill, "Some Advice for the G20," Global Economics Paper No. 181, Goldman Sachs, March 20, 2009. See also Jim O'Neill, "The Brics Economies Must Help Form World Policy," Financial Times, January 22, 2007; Jim O'Neill, "Why It Would Be Wrong to Write Off the Brics," Financial Times, January 5, 2009; Jim O'Neill, "You Can't Build the Future Without