"Towards a Segmented World Order?" Russia in Global Affairs, April 12, 2016.

70. Kirshner, American Power After the Financial Crisis; and Eric Helleiner and Jonathan Kirshner (eds.), The Future of the Dollar (Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2009).

71. Randall L. Schweller and David Priess, "A Tale of Two Realisms: Expanding the Institutions Debate," Mershon International Studies Review 41, supplement 1 (1997): 1–32, at 13.

72. Schweller and Pu, "After Unipolarity."

73. This observation applies only to global governance, not security orders, where Russia has sought to upend the post–Cold War order dominated by the United States and Euro-Atlantic institutions in which Moscow has been only a peripheral player. Russian interventions in Ukraine and Georgia, threats against NATO members, violations of arms control agreements, attacks on Western democratic institutions, as well as its support of political actors opposed to European unity on matters important to Moscow, show that Russia prefers European disorder to the Western dominated regimes that expanded after 1991. China also shows signs of seeking regional dominance.

74. Richard Cornes and Todd Sandler, The Theory of Externalities, Public Goods, and Club Goods, 2nd ed. (New York: Cambridge University Press, 1996), 333–334. For the classic statement, see James M. Buchanan, "An Economic Theory of Clubs," Economica 32, no. 125 (1965): 1–14.

75. Cornes and Sandler, Theory of Externalities, 353–354.

76. Mancur Olson, The Logic of Collective Action (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1965), 39; Cornes and Sandler, Theory of Externalities, 353–354. The theory of clubs used here assumes that "exclusion" is possible when applied to the organization of membership or sharing arrangements. Buchanan, "An Economic Theory," 13.

77. Cornes and Sandler, Theory of Externalities, 370. Drezner assumes a homogeneous membership.

78. Buchanan, "Economic Theory," 13; Todd Sandler and John Tschirhart, "Club Theory: Thirty Years Later," Public Choice 93 (1997): 335–355.

79. Olson, Logic, 34–43; and Frank H. Page and Myrna Wooders, "Networks and Clubs," Journal of Economic Behavior & Organization 64, no. 3 (2007): 406–425.

80. Richard H. Steinberg, "In the Shadow of Law or Power? Consensus-Based Bargaining and Outcomes in the GATT/WTO," International Organization 56, no. 2 (2002): 339–374; Drezner, All Politics Is Global; and Stone, Controlling Institutions.

81. Lipscy, "Explaining Institutional Change"; W. Brian Arthur, Increasing Returns and Path Dependence in the Economy (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1994); Jack A. Goldstone, "Initial Conditions, General Laws, Path Dependence, and Explanation in Historical Sociology," American Journal of Science 104, no. 3 (1988): 829–845.

82. See especially Krasner, "Global Communications and National Power"; Stone, Controlling Institutions; and Gruber, Ruling the World.

83. Gruber, Ruling the World.

84. Stephen G. Brooks and William C. Wohlforth, "Reshaping the World Order: How Washington Should Reform International Institutions," Foreign Affairs 88, no. 2 (March/April 2009), 50.

85. Drezner, All Politics Is Global, Chap. 3.

86. Robert O. Keohane and Joseph S. Nye, Jr., "The Club Model of Multilateral Cooperation and Problems of Democratic Legitimacy," in Power and Governance in a Partially Globalized World, ed. Robert O. Keohane (New York: Routledge, 2002), Chap. 10, 232.

87. Keohane and Nye, "The Club Model," 220. For similar arguments, see Anne Marie Slaughter, A New World Order (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2009).