Countries at Cancún and Beyond," Global Society 20, no. 4 (2006): 415–433; and Hopewell, "Different Paths to Power."

105. Narlikar and Tussie, "The G-20 at the Cancun Ministerial," 962.

106. Vickers, "The Role of the Brics in the WTO," 262, 264.

107. Sergei Ryabkov, speech at the VIIth BRICS Academic Forum, May 22, 2015, http://en.brics2015.ru/news/20150522/107920-print.html.

108. Zhu Guangyao, "BRICs," Jingji Ribao, February 15, 2016.

109. Author's interview with Alexander Kramarenko, Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, June 2008. See also Slaughter, A New World Order.

110. See the discussion in Chap. 3.

111. Ikenberry, After Victory; and Lake, Hierarchy in International Relations.

112. Erik Berglöf, Mike Burkhart, Guido Friebel, and Elena Paltseva, "Club-in-the-Club: Reform Under Unanimity," Journal of Comparative Economics 40, no. 3 (August 2012): 492–507.

113. Erik Voeten, "Outside Options and the Logic of Security Council Action," American Political Science Review 95, no. 4 (December 2001): 845–858; Allison Carnegie, "States Held Hostage: Political Hold-up Problems and the Effects of International Institutions," American Political Science Review 108, no. 1 (February 2014): 54–70.

114. Stone, Controlling Institutions, 224.

115. Voeten, "Outside Options," and Carnegie, "States Held Hostage."

116. Gary Saxonhouse, "Regionalism and US Trade Policy in Asia," in The Economics of Preferential Trade Agreements, ed. Arvind Panagariya and Jagdish Bhagwati (Washington, DC: AEI Press, 1996), 108–135. Vinod K. Aggarwal with Kun-Chin Lin, "Strategy Without Vision: The U.S. and Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation," in APEC: The First Decade, ed. Jürgen Rüland, Eva Manske, and Werner Draguhn (London: Curzon Press, 2002), 91–122.

117. Many scholars date the shift to 2009, in connection with the global financial crisis of that time. See, for example, Suisheng Zhao, "A New Model of Big Power Relations? China-US Strategic Rivalry and Balance of Power in the Asia-Pacific," Journal of Contemporary China 24, no. 93 (2015): 377–397; and Shao Binhong (ed.), The World in 2020 According to China: Chinese Foreign Policy Elites Discuss Emerging Trends in International Politics, vol. 2 (Leiden, Netherlands, and Boston: Brill, 2014).

118. Michael A. Glosny, "China and the BRICs: A Real (but Limited) Partnership in a Unipolar World," Polity 42, no. 1 (2010): 100–129; see also Chap. 4 of this book.

119. This strategy is explained by several Chinese scholars; for example, Hu Shisheng, "Reflections on International Order Transition," Contemporary International Relations, no. 7, 2014; and Wang and Zhu, "Conclusion," Contemporary International Relations.

CHAPTER 2

1. Christopher Layne, "US Hegemony in a Unipolar World: Here to Stay or Sic Transit Gloria?" International Studies Review 11, no. 4 (2009): 784–787, at 785; idem.,"This Time It's Real: The End of Unipolarity and the Pax Americana," International Studies Quarterly 56, no. 1 (2012): 203–213; and John J. Mearsheimer, The Tragedy of Great Power Politics (New York: W.W. Norton, 2001). Joseph Nye contends that in "economic power among states, the world is multipolar," as quoted in Serge Schmemann, "The Seesaw of Power," The New York Times, June 23, 2011.

2. Stephen G. Brooks and William C. Wohlforth, World out of Balance: International Relations and the Challenge of American Primacy (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2008); and