CHAPTER 3

1. Kahler (722) notes, "After four summits, there is little evidence that the BRICS governments have forged any common collective action in global forums; given their divergent national interests in many key negotiations, the group is unlikely to craft an effective programme of action." Miles Kahler, "Rising Powers and Global Governance: Negotiating Change in a Resilient Status Quo," International Affairs 89, no. 3 (2013): 711–729.

2. Benn Steil and Robert E. Litan, Financial Statecraft: The Role of Financial Markets in American Foreign Policy (New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2006); Leslie Elliott Armijo and Saori N. Katada (eds.), The Financial Statecraft of Emerging Powers: Shield and Sword in Asia and Latin America (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2014); David M. Andrews, "Monetary Power and Monetary Statecraft," in International Monetary Power, ed. David Andrews (Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2006); Benjamin J. Cohen, Currency Power: Understanding Monetary Rivalry (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2015).

3. Thus, financial statecraft is most often understood as a subset of economic statecraft, which Hirschman (xv) described as the use of "quotas, exchange controls, capital investment, and other instruments" as instruments of economic warfare. Albert O. Hirschman, National Power and the Structure of Foreign Trade (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1945). See also David A. Baldwin, Economic Statecraft (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1985); Gary C. Hufbauer, Jeffrey Schott, and Kimberly Ann Elliott, Economic Sanctions Reconsidered, 3rd ed. (Washington, DC: Peterson Institute for International Economics, 2009).

4. See the distinction between negative and positive sanctions or inducements in Baldwin, Economic Statecraft, 20–42.

5. Leslie Elliott Armijo and John Echeverri-Gent, "Absolute or Relative Gains? How Status Quo and Emerging Powers Conceptualize Global Finance," in Handbook of International Monetary Relations, ed. Thomas Oatley and William Winecoff (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2014), 144–165; Rawi Abdelal, Capital Rules: The Construction of Global Finance (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2007); Beth A. Simmons, "The International Politics of Harmonization: The Case of Capital Markets Regulation," International Organization 55, no. 3 (2001): 589–620.

6. Robert Jervis, "Cooperation under the Security Dilemma," World Politics 30, no. 2 (1978): 167–214.

7. Moscow Interfax September 30, 2015; and author's interviews.

8. Surprisingly, many otherwise excellent scholarly treatments of the G20 and its role in revising international financial regulation following the 2002–2009 crisis fail to mention the role of the BRICS. For example, see Tony Porter (ed.), Transnational Financial Regulation After the Crisis (New York: Routledge, 2014).

9. Harry Eckstein, "Case Study and Theory in Political Science," in Strategies of Inquiry, ed. Fred Greenstein and Nelson Polsby (Reading, MA: Addison-Wesley, 1975), 79–138; Gary King et al., Designing Social Inquiry: Scientific Inference in Qualitative Research (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1994). In a general sense, these are "crucial cases" for the argument that BRICS matter.

10. "No Consensus on Immediate Setting up of BRICS Rating Agency," Business Standard, October 16, 2016; "Goa Declaration," 8th BRICS Summit, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, October 16, 2016, http://mea.gov.in/bilateral-documents.htm?dtl/27491/Goa_Declaration_at_8th_BRICS_Summit. For all BRICS summits, see also BRICS Official Documents and Meetings (BRICS Information Centre, University of Toronto; accessible at www.brics.utoronto.ca).