124. Han Yi, “NDB to Issue Yuan-Denominated Bond in Its Maiden Fundraiser,” Caixin Online, July 15, 2016.

125. Thus, Beijing has described One Belt, One Road (OBOR) “as the most important mid- to long-term strategy to foster China’s economic restructuring and boost the country’s slowing economic growth.”Li Qiaoyi, “Making It Work: High Hopes for ‘One Belt, One Road’ Initiative,” Global Times, March 10, 2015, http://www.globaltimes.cn/content/911258.shtml.

126. Zhang Yangpeng, “China Development Bank Overseas Loan Hits $328.2 Billion,” China Daily, December 16, 2015. See also the CDB’s website, http://www.cdb.com.cn/english/andeximbank.gov.cn/en/.

127. Wang Liwei and Coco Feng, “AIIB vs. NDB: Can New Players Change the Rules of Development Financing?” Caixin Online, September 8, 2016.

128. Simeon Djankov, “The Rationale Behind China’s Belt and Road Initiative,” in China’s Belt and Road Initiative: Motives, Scope, and Challenges, ed. Simeon Djankov and Sean Miner, PIEE, March 2016, 6; Jane Perlez, “Remaking Global Trade in China’s Image,” New York Times, May 14, 2017, A1.

129. See the Silk Road Fund website, http://www.silkroadfund.com.cn/enweb/23775/23767/index.html.

130. Yong Wang, “Offensive for Defensive: The Belt and Road Initiative and China’s New Grand Strategy,” The Pacific Review 29, no. 3 (2016): 455–463.

131. Liwei and Feng, “AIIB vs NDB.”

132. Scott Morris, “Responding to AIIB: U.S. Leadership at the Multilateral Development Banks in a New Era,” Council on Foreign Relations, August 2016.

133. Ibid., 11–13.

134. Asian Development Bank, Infrastructure for a Seamless Asia (Manila, Philippines: Asian Development Bank, 2009).

135. Shawn Donnan and Demetri Sevastopulo, “AIIB Head Vows to be Clean, Lean, and Green—and Fast,” Financial Times, October 25, 2015.

136. Shintaro Hamanaka, “Insights to Great Powers’ Desire to Establish Institutions: Comparison of ADB, AMF, AMRO, and AIIB,” Global Policy 7, no. 2 (2016): 1–6.

137. Tom Mitchell, “Concerns Remain over Chinese Rival to Asian Development Bank,” Financial Times, October 24, 2014.

138. U.S. President Barack Obama’s government actively lobbied against the AIIB, demonstrating his concern about transparency and governance of the institution. He stated, “It could be a positive thing, but if it’s not run well, it could be a negative thing.” Obama’s speech at the time of Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s visit on April 28, 2015. The White House, Office of the Press Secretary, Remarks by President Obama and Prime Minister Abe of Japan in Joint Press Conference, April 28, 2015, https://www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2015/04/28/remarks-president-obama-and-prime-minister-abe-japan-joint-press-confere.

139. Sid Verma, “Brics Take the Road Less Travelled,” Euromoney, September 2015.

140. Given the AIIB’s decision-making rules, and according to the Articles of Agreement (Article 28), China’s voting share of 26.1 percent will give Beijing veto power on important issues that would require a supermajority of votes (above 75 percent), such as an increase in total capital subscription, the election of its president, and termination of bank operations. Masahiro Kawai, “Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank in the Evolving International Financial Order,” and Yun Sun, “China and the Evolving Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank,” in Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank: China as Responsible Stakeholder? ed. Daniel Bob (Washington, DC: Sasakawa Peace Foundation USA, 2015), 5–26, 27–42.