175. Foot and Walter, China, the United States, and Global Order. On Russia, the Basel Committee noted that "several aspects of the domestic rules . . . are more rigorous than required under the Basel framework." See "Basel III Implementation Assessments of Russia and Turkey," published by the Basel Committee, March 15, 2016. See also Zhenbo Hou, Jodie Keane, and Dirk Willem te Velde, "Will the BRICS Provide the Global Public Good the World Needs?" ODI Report, June 2014.

176. "China's BRICS Trade Pact Idea Finds No Takers," The Hindu, September 10, 2016.

177. For the suggestion that BRICS prefer a Concert structure for relations among great powers, see Cynthia Roberts, "Are the BRICS Building a Non-Western Concert of Powers?" The National Interest, July 2015, http://nationalinterest.org/feature/are-the-brics-building-non-western-concert-powers-13280.

178. John J. Kirton, "Changing Global Governance for a Transformed World," in The G8–G20 Relationship in Global Governance, ed. Marina Larionova and John J. Kirton (London: Ashgate, 2015), Chap. 2.

179. Randall L. Schweller and David Priess, "A Tale of Two Realisms: Expanding the Institutions Debate," Mershon International Studies Review 41, Supplement 1 (1997): 1–32.

CHAPTER 4

1. See especially Daniel W. Drezner, All Politics Is Global: Explaining International Regulatory Regimes (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2007), Chap. 5. ; Randall W. Stone, Controlling Institutions: International Organizations and the Global Economy (Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press, 2011); and Richard H. Steinberg, "In the Shadow of Law or Power? Consensus-Based Bargaining and Outcomes in the GATT/WTO," International Organization 56, no. 2 (Spring 2002): 339–374.

2. Margaret P. Karns and Karen A. Mingst, International Organizations: The Politics and Processes of Global Governance (Boulder, CO: Lynne Rienner, 2004), 29.

3. Roman Grynberg et al., Toward a New Pacific Regionalism: An Asian Development Bank-Commonwealth Secretariat Joint Report to the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat, vol. 1 (executive summary, Asian Development Bank, 2005).

4. Leslie Elliott and John Echeverri-Gent, "Absolute or Relative Gains? How Status Quo and Emerging Powers Conceptualize Global Finance," in Handbook of International Monetary Relations, ed. Thomas Oatley and William Winecoff (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2014), 144–165.

5. Jonathan Kirshner, American Power After the Financial Crisis (Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2014), 1–17.

6. Evidence for such practices is discussed in Catherine Weaver, Hypocrisy Trap: The World Bank and the Poverty of Reform (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2008); Steinberg, "In the Shadow of Law or Power?"; and Mlada Bukovansky, "Institutionalized Hypocrisy and the Politics of Agricultural Trade," in Constructing the International Economy, ed. Rawi Abdelal, Mark Blyth, and Craig Parsons (Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2010), 68–90.

7. See Michael A. Glosny, "China and the BRICs: A Real (but Limited) Partnership in a Unipolar World," Polity 42, no. 1 (2010): 100–129.

8. Geoffrey Garrett, "G2 in G20: China, the United States, and the World After the Global Financial Crisis," Global Policy 1, no. 1 (2010): 29–39.

9. The phrase was first promoted by Xi Jinping at the time of his meeting with U.S. president Barack Obama at Sunnylands, California, in March 2013, at which time Xi emphasized three points: (1) no conflict or confrontation, and an emphasis on dialogue; (2) mutual respect, including respect