President Rousseff, apparently concluding that her brief attempt at fiscal orthodoxy had not worked, replaced Levy with Planning Minister Nelson Barbosa, who in early 2016 announced a new round of government spending to stimulate Brazil's economy, which shrank by 3.7 percent in 2015.

265. China in 2009 replaced the United States as Brazil's major trading partner. Nonetheless, Brazil's trade remains geographically diversified (and intentionally so), with 19 percent of exports in 2015 going to China, but 17 percent to the United States, 24 percent to other Asian countries, 19 percent to Western Europe, and 19 percent to Latin America, according to the Ministry of Development, Industry, and Commerce (MDIC) website.
