outward direct investment by, 120;
overseas revenues and, 40;
“peaceful rise” strategy of, 9, 19, 121;
per capita GDP in, 41;
political and economic reforms in, 115;
preparing parallel governance arrangements, 12;
private sector in, 34, 40;
productivity of, 34;
pursuing independent interests, 33;
quotas in, 63;
R&D in, 39, 42;
rating firms in, 96;
relations with Brazil, 153–157;
relations with India, 113, 145–147;
relations with Russia, 90, 113;
relations with South Africa, 157–158;
rise of, 22, 25;
savings glut in, 114;
seeking protection from dominance of US dollar, 81;
self-image of, in international finance, 113;
services sector in, 34–35;
sovereign wealth funds in, 63, 97, 103, 120;
state capitalism of, 34, 40, 61–62, 97, 171;
stock exchanges in, 45–48;
structural problems in, 35;
supporting cooperation among BRICS members, 113;
surpluses of, cumulative, 38;
sympathizing with developing countries and emerging markets, 117;
total factor productivity in, 34;
trade and investment liberalization in, 38;
trade of, 38, 87, 90, 115, 179;
underrepresented in global governance institutions, 74;
as US’ principal global competitor, 24;
as veto player in the WTO, 187n51;
workforce in, 36;
world’s largest energy consumer and importer, 97;
world’s largest middle class in, 29
China-Africa Summit, 158
China Chengxin Credit Rating Group, 96
China Development Bank, 95, 97, 100, 115, 154, 155–156
China Institutes of Contemporary International Relations, 217nn36–37
China Interbank Bond Market, 50
China Investment Corporation, 120
China Lianhe Credit Rating Co., 96
China Miracle, 170
China Model, 170, 171
China 2020 Research Team, 194n25, 233n7
“China threat” thesis, 121
Chinese Communist Party, 113–114, 122
Chinese Dream, 122, 123, 220n80