rendered European countries overrepresented in global governance institutions, making them the main target of would-be reformers from the BRICS. Figures 3.1 and 3.2 show the BRICS, G7, and EU quota shares in the IMF relative to their respective shares of world gross domestic product (GDP), first in market exchange rates (MER) and second in purchasing power parity (PPP). In both measures, the EU countries are overrepresented, while the still-dominant United States is underrepresented in market rates and slightly overrepresented in PPP terms. In these graphs, 1 equals fair value, while ratios greater than 1 signify overrepresentation and ratios less than 1 signify underrepresentation.
