

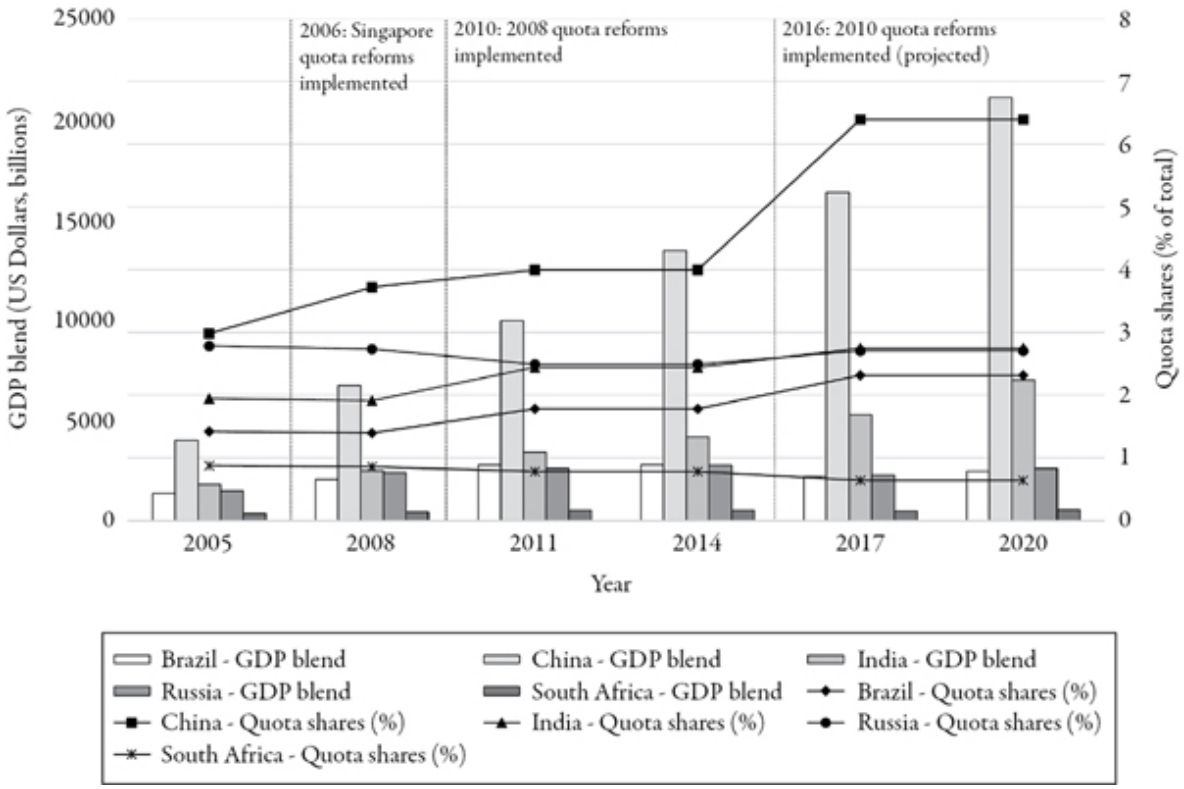

FIGURE 3.4 GDP Blend and IMF Quota Shares: Individual BRICS, 2005–2020

Source: IMF World Economic Outlook, April 2016 update; C. Roberts calculations.

The 2008 ad hoc shift of shares still left Europe overrepresented, with Germany, the United Kingdom, and France outranking China and Europe as a whole in control of one-third of the chairs on the executive board. The combined quota and voting shares of the EU members (including the United Kingdom) declined from the 2008 packages of 31.9 and 30.9 percent to 30.4 and 29.4 percent, respectively, under the current 2010 package. Europeans also agreed in 2008 to a reduction of two fewer board seats from advanced European countries, but these could go to developing countries in Europe or members of Euro-Atlantic institutions. Thus, Belgium's chair was replaced by Turkey.

Russia was unhappy about its slightly reduced position, so in 2008, it abstained in the Council of Governors vote on the reforms. Moscow continued to support collective BRICS positions strongly, but like Saudi Arabia, it refused to support the 2010 deal unless the reallocation to underrepresented countries in the IMF came at the expense of states other