depicting the "inner workings of the mind". 'Evolving Horizons' comes next, with depictions of nature, landscapes and even ideas of identity going through "processes of growth, erosion, adaptation and renewal". Part of that growth and change is, of course, urbanisation, which leads one to 'City Life'. The exhibition comes to a close with a celebration of Kolkata, which Vishal Kumar Dev, curator of this exhibition, describes as "one of the most expressive cities in India".

With overlapping themes, it's almost impossible to tell where each section ends and another begins. 'Evolving Horizons' and 'City Life', for example, are separated and united by Rajkumar Samal's 'The Balance'. It shows a giant plumb bob that hangs from the ceiling. The sand brick, cement and fibre sculpture tethered to the very structure of the Currency Building seems to give Bengal's artists a new currency. ■

—Malini Banerjee

Vivartan runs at NGMA Kolkata, Old Currency Building, till Jun. 30

THAT MARIO MAGIC
Left, cover for Dharmayug, 1972; bottom, an inimitable character from Miranda's take on Bollywood

EXHIBITION ▼

THE COMIC CHRONICLER

An exhibition at the Sunaparanta Goa Centre for the Arts pays tribute to the legendary cartoonist Mário Miranda in his centenary year

Few artists have captured the pulse of India like the beloved cartoonist Mário Miranda. Way before memes and social media, Miranda was sketching out the chaos of daily life with sharp humour and an eye for detail. Be it packed Bombay trains, buzzing cafés, nosy neighbours or those quintessential Goan types; generations grew up with his iconic characters like Miss Fonseca and Miss Nimbupani.

On his birth centenary, Goa is paying tribute to the artist and his universe. Growing Up in Mário's World, an exhibition at the Sunaparanta Goa Centre for the Arts, brings together a rich repository of works spanning Miranda's career. Rare sketches, European illustrations from the 1950s and iconic magazine works feature in the exhibition curated from the collection of Shaun Nicholas Lobo, whose late father Ronnie spent years building an archive of Miranda's art and memorabilia.

VISITORS CAN ALSO EXPLORE ARCHIVAL PHOTOS, LETTERS AND EPHEMERA THAT OFFER A GLIMPSE OF MIRANDA'S LIFE

Visitors can also explore archival photographs, letters and printed ephemera that offer a glimpse into the artist's life and creative evolution. "Miranda had the ability to observe the world with warmth, precision and gentle irreverence. Through his drawings, he chronicled the social life of Goa, Mumbai and other places, revealing the humour, contradictions, and rhythms of everyday life," says Dattaraj V. Salgaocar, chairman of Sunaparanta Goa Centre for the Arts.

"In addition to the generations that have grown up with Mario's cartoons, the exhibition has seen a huge interest from younger audiences. Many works on display showcase Mário in the 1960s, which adds a completely new dimension to the artist," adds Lobo.

A limited-edition anthology, Growing Up with Mário, edited by Lobo, has also been launched. The exhibition will conclude with a live performance by the traditional Goanese brass band Azavedo. ■

—Deepa Natarajan Lobo

The exhibition is on view till Jun. 28

