

The kitchen, led by Chef Zafar, draws from Peru's coastal, Andean, and Amazonian ecosystems while working closely with Indian seasonal produce. Ceviches, tiraditos, and causas give way to open-fire grills and slow-cooked preparations where ají, citrus, smoke, and fermentation define the flavour architecture. Techniques of curing, charring, and marination bring structure; a minimal-intervention approach ensures the ingredient remains sovereign. The menu is, in the truest sense, a map of two geographies—Peru's culinary heritage and India's extraordinary larder—drawn together with quiet confidence.

The beverage programme is set to be one of the most extensive agave-focussed offerings in the country—a serious collection of tequila and mezcal supported by cocktails that draw on botanical infusions, fermentation, and ingredient-led technique. From bright, citrus-led highballs to deeper, spirit-forward pours layered with smoke, the bar is conceived as an extension of the kitchen rather than its counterpart. In India, where agave culture has only recently begun to find its footing among genuinely curious drinkers, The Azulian House positions itself as the destination at which that conversation matures.

GLENDRONACH, SCOTLAND—AN INDIA EXCLUSIVE

Rachel Barrie Brings GlenDronach to India; The legendary Master Distiller arrives—and so does her whisky.

There are perhaps a handful of figures in the global Scotch whisky world whose presence at a launch transforms an event into an occasion. Rachel Barrie is one of them. Master Distiller, industry pioneer, and the woman who has shaped some of Scotland's most celebrated expressions across multiple storied distilleries, Barrie's arrival in India for the GlenDronach launch was extraordinary.

GlenDronach—the Highland distillery whose commitment to sherry cask maturation has made it a reference point for richness, depth, and complexity—has long attracted a passionate following among Scotch connoisseurs in India. But a formal, dedicated launch, led by the distillery's own master distiller, was something else entirely. It is an acknowledgement of India's maturity as a market; an investment in conversation rather than mere distribution.

Barrie's signature style—deep, Christmas-cake richness layered against dried fruit, dark chocolate, and warming spice—translates extraordinarily well to the Indian palate. In a country that has always understood the seduction of a long, layered finish, GlenDronach arrives not as a newcomer but as a natural fit.
Price: 12YO ₹6,500; 15YO ₹10,000; 18YO ₹16,000-17000 (750 ml)

