

FINE LIVING
HEALTH

UNPLUG THE CITY

Exhausted? The Shangri-La Eros's new Wellness Club is your mandatory mind-body reset. Exhale!

Chumki Bharadwaj

A spa at any city five star hotel usually summons more of the same: The tried and tested for the tired and testy. But as urban woes add to the grind of nine-to-nine living, a lymphatic drainage massage or Swedish techniques using aromatherapy oils may not always cut it. Step into the subterranean environs of the cavernous new Wellness Club at the Shangri-La Eros New Delhi and they may just offer a more unique wellness wellspring. Discerning biohackers and wellness connoisseurs will find much to engage, and what makes it even more alluring, at least for me, is that it sits, smack in the middle of Delhi's racing heart, and yet offers the kind of quietude that is a rationed indulgence at best.

Generously endowed with almost 27,000 sq. ft. of sanctuary space, the fitness area laps up about 4,000 sq. ft. with a gym, yes, but more importantly with advanced recovery therapies, which include the Hypervolt Pro 2 for deep muscle relief, the Normatec 3 (uses dynamic air compression) for enhanced warm-up and recovery, and red-light therapy panels to help with healing, pain relief and improved sleep. Lest I forget, an outdoor 100-feet lap pool, a calming hydrothermal zone with a cold plunge, Finnish Sauna with Himalayan Salt walls, a temperature-controlled whirlpool, and a steam room, all test waters

