

Clockwise from the left: Stretching by the poolside; Red Light Therapy; Hydrothermal zone; Normatec compression to its best advantage. Of course, AQI-controlled interiors are de rigueur when it comes to choked Delhi, but this is also a 100 per cent plastic-free zone so your soul can take a mini vacation too.

The Spa is a cocooned embrace of languorously outstretched suites, kitted with heated beds, steam showers, bathtubs and an indulgence ensemble that makes sense, sensibility and satiety do a merry jig. Signature rituals that stand out include the Taste of India Retreat, Signature Indulgence, and a Couple's Serenity Bath—nourishing and quietly romantic in equal parts.

While boosted collagen and skin renewal have earned their place in the beauty pecking order, but the one variable that stands for deep rejuvenation on a cellular level or so they say is mental health. Interestingly, the Wellness Club hosts a psychic and spiritual healer at the club to "elevate inner harmony".

A spiritual healer at a wellness centre may seem a little unorthodox, but Seerat Garewal Pasricha is clear about what she brings to the table: "Spiritual healing, to me, is less about "fixing" someone and more about helping them reconnect with themselves. Today, even many effectively functioning people feel emotionally overwhelmed, disconnected, anxious, or energetically exhausted. My work combines my educational background in psychology with holistic and intuitive practices like energy and chakra work, tarot, guided reflection, breath awareness, and grounding rituals to create space for emotional clarity and inner alignment," she adds.

So whether it's action or advice you need, Pasricha recommends creating intentional pauses. And while you're pondering on existential questions, do so by the poolside, where the pool deck transforms into a living resort, as part of the summer's Palmera Pool Pop-Up—the hotel's collaboration with luxury holiday lifestyle brand SHIVAN & NARRESH. Who says wellness can't make a fashion statement?

Costs: Spa treatments: Taste of India ₹18,000++; Signature Indulgence ₹14,000++