BMW has brought the M2 CS to India, making it the second CS model to make its debut here. The CS is the most extreme version of the M2, and is 30kg lighter using a carbon-fibre bootlid, roof and trim elements. The M-specific suspension has been revised with adjustments made to the dampers, springs and an 8mm lower ride height. The CS also gets a slightly larger grille, allowing more air to the engine, and a new splitter. It gets staggered 19 and 20-inch forged alloys, wrapped in Michelin Pilot Sport 4S tyres. The M2 CS debuts a massive integrated ducktail spoiler that adds to the stability while the larger diffuser and quad exhaust tips add to the performance and drama. While it continues with the same 3.0-litre twin-turbo motor, the revisions to the internals mean that the M2 CS has access to 530bhp and 650Nm of torque, with 0 to 100kmph coming up in a claimed 3.8 seconds. The power is sent to the rear wheels only, via an 8-speed automatic gearbox.
