

Clockwise from opposite page: The Tree Tomato Custard; Black Rice Momo and Smoked Pork; Black Soy Bean Tart; Yam Milk and Bamboo Broth

For the mains, the Smoked Naga stands out: layered, intense and thoughtfully put together. The vegetarian option features kochu, a local variety of taro, roasted and finished with turmeric butter. Another highlight is the Anushi squash (also available with chicken), served alongside a slow-cooked squash or chicken terrine.

The black wheat noodles with a creamy bamboo sauce are served with smoked fish for the non-vegetarians and a unique, mildly flavoured chayote/chow-chow for the vegetarians. One can also savour the house-made breads with a variety of condiments including the fiery fermented bhut jolokia paste, hot enough to set the taste buds on fire.

For dessert, a buttery Napa (Naga herb) cupcake is served with an accompaniment of soft charred pineapple on a bed of diplomat. This is followed by an overripe banana ice cream with an added punch of Sichuan peppers and a drizzle of chocolate ganache; a fitting close to the grand meal. In a city that is always on the move, Nila invites guests to experience the beauty of local ingredients, one thoughtful course at a time.

COST ₹4,550 per person plus taxes

WHERE Nila Restaurant, 9-1/2, Cambridge Road, Halasuru, Bengaluru – 560008 (Reservation only)

