

each piece daring you to look closer. Even the corridors feel intentional, showcasing Tom Adair's artistic Easter eggs, offering serendipitous surprises for those who linger. The culinary scene, though, steals the show. 'Braddon Merchant' is every foodie's dream, a European deli reincarnated in chic Aussie style. Seasonal, uncomplicated plates sit beside artisanal delights you can grab and go. And don't miss 'Midnight Bar,' where the cocktails are nothing short of poetry—a nod to Canberra's shifting culinary ambitions. Bonus? Its wine list isn't just impressive; it's award winning. Take a sunset stroll, or a Lekker X e-bike, around Braddon's breweries and refined restos, but don't stray too far. Midnight Hotel, part of Marriott's Autograph Collection, is where Canberra's essence sleeps—and celebrates.

MIDNIGHT HOTEL, CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA

If Canberra were a hotel, it would undoubtedly be 'Midnight Hotel'. A shimmering testament to Australia's creative genius, this Fender Katsalidis designed marvel turns Braddon, a suburb pulsing with green energy and hipster charm, into its playground. Picture this: sharp-edged concrete elegance softened by art that hums with soul. It's a building that doesn't merely stand, it breathes. Each of its 199 rooms owns a unique story courtesy of Thomas Bucich's 'Relic Series'; imagine reclaimed Aussie timber refined into gilded heirlooms,
