

BUILT TO LAST
Classical wooden detailing is paired with integrated storage

ERGONOMICS IS ESSENTIAL

True luxury is moving away from mere aesthetics toward a connected framework of intuitive storage, durable materials and effortless workflow

By SUKRITI SHARRMA

Custom made kitchens have moved well beyond the idea of cabinetry arranged along a wall. Today, the conversation is centred on active organisation, where every section is planned to support how the space is used each day. The modern kitchen is no longer treated as a collection of cupboards and counters. It is a carefully considered environment where movement, storage, access, and workflow are arranged with intent, reducing unnecessary effort and making everyday use more intuitive.

Smarter Storage, Better Access

One of the clearest shifts can be seen in how storage is approached. Corners, deep cabinets and hard-to-reach zones are no longer considered wasted space. Systems such as the Magic Corner transform underused areas into fully accessible storage, bringing contents outward with ease. The result is better visibility, simpler access, and more