

and structure," he says, adding, "but the stylist is about the lift." He views styling as an extension of a homeowner's happiness, a versatile, dust-free way to refresh a space without the commitment of a full renovation.

Global Roadmap

Five years into his independent practice, Kukreja manages a borderless portfolio. His projects range from luxury fusion homes in Gurgaon's Camellias to collaborations with Afghani clients in London. His next chapter involves a curated product line sourcing unique decor from Nagaland to Tibet, blending a distinct Indian aesthetic with modern sensibilities.

In an industry obsessed with the next big thing, Kukreja remains refreshingly defiant. He ignores fleeting trends, choosing instead to let his intuition lead. From a Hindi-medium student in Alwar to a stylist with a global footprint, he has proven that when you build your own roadmap, the world eventually catches up to your vision.

CREATIVE CORNER
Raahul Kukreja poses in his recently redone studio in Alwar, where he keeps experimenting with the look