PHOTOGRAPHY ▼

GAZE MOST POETIC

An exhibition of Shambhu Shaha's iconic photographs of Rabindranath Tagore offers a glimpse into Santiniketan's cultural history

GURUDEV'S WORLD A portrait of Tagore; (top) welcoming Gandhi and Kasturba, Amra Kunj, Santiniketan, Feb. 18, 1940

The Musui Art Foundation at Tokaroun in Santiniketan is presenting An Artscape and a Poet, an exhibition of rare archival photographs by pioneering Indian photographer Shambhu Shaha. Running until July 25, the exhibition brings together 50 photographs taken between 1935 and 1941, many centred around Rabindranath Tagore during the final years of his life.

The exhibition is organised by eminent sculptor K.S. Radhakrishnan. "I see archival material as living history. It is as much a source for artistic learning and inspiration as the world around us," he says, adding that preserving authentic photographic archives has become increasingly important in an era shaped by digital manipulation and rapidly circulating edited visual imagery. The exhibition also continues Tokaroun's longstanding engagement with memory, archives, photography and

THE EXHIBITION BRINGS TOGETHER 50 PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN BETWEEN 1935 AND 1941, MANY CENTRED AROUND TAGORE'S FINAL YEARS

SCENE BY SCENE Ray behind the camera, 1974; (right) with wife Bijoya, 1986

RAY IN TECHNICOLOUR

A NEW EXHIBITION AT DAG DELHI SPOTLIGHTS NEMAI GHOSH'S RARELY SEEN COLOUR PHOTOGRAPHS OF SATYAJIT RAY

Nemai Ghosh first met auteur Satyajit Ray in Rampurhat, a sleepy little town in West Bengal, where he was shooting Goopy Gyne Bagha Byne in 1968. Everything about Ray intrigued Ghosh, and the latter's two rolls of black-and-white film were finished in no time. The two forged a deep friendship, and