To the Moon and Back

Walking into Delhi Vintage Co. flagship in Lado Sarai is like stepping into a 10,000 sq ft sundial. Designed by Smita Singh of NoDoor, the atrium is governed by the lunar cycle, with strategic openings that pull in shafts of kinetic sunlight. It's an airy, double-height volume where industrial cement tones let the bespoke couture breathe. Founder Manish Chhabra aimed for an unconventional retail experience, filling the rooms with his private collection of Indian artefacts and custom scents. Singh's ultimate goal? "To blur the boundary between a gallery and a home."

STELLAR STYLE

The store's architectural elements beautifully capture the phases of a lunar eclipse (top and right); founder Manish Chhabra (above)