

Bejewelled Beauty

Located in Mumbai's Chemco House, Farah Khan Ali's 1,100 sq ft boutique is envisioned as a gallery of emotions. Working with architect Usama Patel of Studio Nineteen, the interior is bathed in a signature apricot-amber glow, a tribute to memory and the Zarine collection, inspired by Farah's late mother. Khan Ali describes the boutique as a homage to craft, where the brand's identity comes alive. Patel adds that the Aayat motif "quietly guided the flow, lending the experience a sense of rhythm and understated grace."

Heritage Meets Couture

Divani Couture has inaugurated a new flagship store in Hyderabad designed by Habitat Architects, which merges Deccan heritage with dazzling design elements like dark timber arches and jewel-like chandeliers. "Retail interiors often rely on surface drama, but couture deserves an architectural language that holds it with dignity. We worked with proportion, symmetry and a strong axial sequence, allowing visitors to move through the space almost ceremonially," says Zafar Choudhary, founder and CEO, Habitat Architects. Sanya Dhir , founder and creative director, Divani Couture agrees, adding that it's all about "living legacies that must evolve with time".

LUXE LAUNCH
Usama Patel with Farah Khan Ali and the interiors of the store in Mumbai (above); the new Divani Couture showroom in Hyderabad (right)

