BREAKING THE MOULD

How a cramped, load-bearing heritage structure was reimagined into a sun-drenched, column-free sanctuary for modern Indian living

By MANOJ SABNANI AND KIRAN SABNANI

Photographs by ARJUN KRISHNA

Like the first rains that breathe life into parched earth, Saundh is a testament to the power of architectural revival. This 50-year-old residence has been transformed from a cramped, aging structure into a vibrant, modern Indian home that blooms with memory and possibility. By blending the client's deep-rooted heritage with contemporary spatial innovation, the design creates a sanctuary where ancestral echoes meet the functional rhythms of today.

From Dark to Divine

The most significant triumph of the project lay in navigating the constraints of the original load-bearing structure. What was once a dark, fragmented zone of three tiny rooms was transformed as a seamless, airy haven. To achieve this without compromising the building's integrity, the design team integrated ISMB steel beams for support, carving out an expansive, column-free layout. This structural intervention allowed large windows to flood the home with natural light, creating a fluid connection between the open kitchen, dining area and the home's spiritual heart.