

Symphony of Ancestral Craft

The interiors serve as a curated gallery for the family's 70-year-old heritage. Ancestral brass pieces, a veena, and an mridangam take centre stage, their rich patinas infusing the rooms with cultural significance. The home's history is further honoured through the adaptive reuse of materials: old teakwood has been reborn as modern doors and accents, while an ancient temple door has been preserved and transformed into a striking piece of wall art.

Modern Indian Aesthetics

The design narrative is enriched by a tactile palette of batik blocks, silk and jute, whispering tales of ancient craftsmanship. Elegant architectural arcs add a classic charm, while Indian-inspired wallpapers and bespoke hand-painted art on walls and doors create a sense of continuity. Every surface, from the carefully selected marble flooring to the textured niches, was chosen to harmonise the home's deep roots with a fresh, contemporary elegance.

Project Saundh is more than a renovation; it is a masterpiece of storytelling where engineering and artistry converge. By weaving together the structural demands of a heritage building with the emotional resonance of family heirlooms, the residence stands as a perfect harmony of past and present. A home that is grounded, airy and alive with the spirit of Indian culture.
