

This isn't just a few scattered cushions; it's a total spatial reimagining. Sunbeds draped in bespoke Palmera covers, poolside couches layered with rugs and cushions that practically demand a languid afternoon. Tables are styled with Branchia candle stands and statement rugs, blurring the line between style and art. This also marks a bold leap for SHIVAN & NARRESH Homes, proving that their design language, bold prints and sensual silhouettes, is just as comfortable on a terrace as it is on a bikini.

The designers weren't just looking to change the view; they wanted to change the vibe. "With the Palmera Pool Pop-Up, we wanted to dissolve the boundaries between fashion, design and experience," says Shivan Bhatiya. "It's not just a poolside, it's a living narrative where every detail from print to service, invites guests into a world of indulgence, escapism and unapologetic boldness," adds Narresh Kukreja.

By merging high-fashion aesthetics with a 27,000 sq ft wellness sanctuary, the duo is setting a new benchmark for how we consume luxury. It's a "passport to global luxury" without the jet lag. As they aptly put it: "Bringing this vision to life in India for the first time is our way of redefining how luxury can be experienced beyond the wardrobe."

So, if you're looking to soak up the sun this season, do it where the decor is as curated as your Instagram feed. After all, why just wear the brand when you can live inside it?
