PLAY YOUR CARDS RIGHT

A fashion designer and an interior maven partner up to create wallpaper that proves the best dressed homes will always hold a winning hand

By RIDHI KALE

Move over, basic painted accent walls, there's a new deck in town. In a design landscape where fashion labels increasingly refuse to stay confined to our wardrobes, clothing brand MATI has officially crossed over into the interior design world. Partnering with luxury wallcovering brand Zyvorah, MATI has re-engineered its iconic, deck-of-cards-inspired fashion line into a premium wallpaper range called the TAASH collection. The creative minds behind the line, Fatima K. Punjaabi (founder and creative director, MATI.) and Roheena Nagpal (founder, Zyvorah), sat down to chat about taking risks, why perfect walls are boring and how they managed to make paper look exactly like raw Indian khadi.

Imperfectly Perfect Deal

The synergy between the two founders felt seamless from day one, driven by a mutual frustration with run-of-the-mill
