Q+A

Soul Music

Kailash Kher's new single 'Tham Jaa' captures the beauty of being present in love, blending contemporary sounds with timeless spirituality*

Q. 'Tham Jaa' is about asking someone to stay. What drew you to this emotion?

In this fast-paced world, everyone loves, and everyone expresses it in their own unique way. People try to impress their beloved, but in reality, they get caught up taking photos or recording videos, and the real moment slips away. So, 'Tham Jaa' is the pure emotion of those moments.

Q. Your songs often mix love and devotion. Does this happen naturally when you create music?

When you write songs about love, especially when Kailash Kher writes in the form of 'Kailasa', the purest form of love and romantic songs, they definitely carry a purity that reflects spirituality too. While the text may seem worldly, its inner essence and expression stem from the bond between the soul and the Divine.

Q. 'Tham Jaa' has both modern and traditional sounds. How did you create that balance?

My music was rooted in devotion right from the beginning. However, when you bring devotional music into the modern world, people tend to mock it. By God's grace, we were able to break the stereotypes and brought spiritual and devotional music into a sound that was contemporary.

Q. What are you working on next?

We are now working on albums and releasing singles, one song every month or every few weeks, because the traditional format of releasing eight songs at a time has changed with digitisation. We have also created a separate company, Kailasa Advertising, to support new artists. We launch new singers, musicians, sound engineers and other artists, and provide new artists and album makers with complete solutions.

—with Akshita Jolly

Photograph by CHANDRADEEP KUMAR