

hand embroideries, machine embroideries, different types of knots and exploring different materials that can be embroidered. In stitching, our quilts are completely hand-stitched," she adds.

Thrice as Nice

Since launching vVyom in 2018 focused primarily on bedding, Garg has scaled the business into three distinct operating verticals. First, there is vVyom Retail, the foundation line with signature bedding, cushions and table linens. Then there is vVyom Gifting, a curated division that expands the brand far beyond textiles. "In gifting, we have tableware, plates, platters, trays, bottles and glass sets. A lot of thought even goes into how a person opens the box," Garg explains. To top this, she also has vVyom Bespoke, a hyper-luxury division focused entirely on custom textiles, wall installations and art setups for high-end residential and commercial interiors.

Dressing Heritage Properties

The bespoke vertical has allowed Garg to take her textiles to a massive architectural scale. The brand has already created custom work for iconic heritage luxury hotels, including India's legendary Rambagh Palace and Lake Palace, with more ultra-luxury properties currently on the horizon. "We do everything curated for luxury interiors and hospitality projects, including embroidered walls and art installations," she shares.

When asked about what comes next after setting up her flagship, the designer prefers to keep her focus strictly on the immediate creative work. So, while the future remains unwritten, one thing is certain, vVyom has officially got the capital's luxury decor scene completely stitched up.
