Q. Should the Women's Reservation Act, 2023, be implemented without linking it to the delimitation exercise?

Yes No DK/ CS

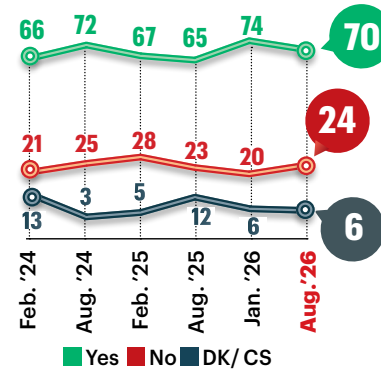

A near majority wants the Women's Reservation Act enforced without waiting for delimitation

Q. Do you think the BJP government misuses enforcement agencies such as ED, CBI and I-T department more than other governments?

Yes No, governments of all parties misuse these agencies; Rest, DK/ CS

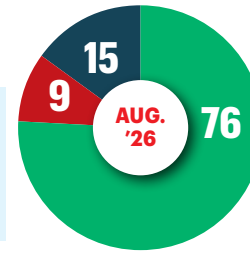

Q. Do you support the idea of One Nation, One Poll?

Yes No DK/ CS

Q. Is illegal immigration a serious threat to India's security and demography?

Yes No DK/ CS

More than three-quarters see illegal immigration as a serious threat

All figures in % and rounded off; DK/ CS: Don't know/ can't say

75 PER CENT
Support for a Uniform Civil Code is near its peak since 2021; only 13 per cent are against it ernments. Another 8.1 per cent blame only the Centre and 6.6 per cent only the Uttar Pradesh government. Taken together, 61.3 per cent say the episode has hurt their perception of at least one of the two governments.

The responses on caste-based reservations deserve equal attention, particularly after the latest protests. The largest cohort, 36.3 per cent, still occupies the middle ground: reservation, they believe, has some benefits but needs reform. But the more significant movement lies beneath it. The share wanting caste-based reservation abolished altogether has risen from 28 per cent in January to 32.2 per cent, the highest in the past three surveys. Meanwhile, the share saying reservation is necessary for social equality has slipped from 26.7 per cent a year ago to 23.9 per cent now, also the lowest of the three readings.

One way to read both the reservation and paper-leak protests is as expressions of a deeper anxiety among the youth over access to scarce opportunities—and whether effort still reliably translates into opportunity. That unease is also visible in how respondents judge the govern-