Preserving a Legacy

Honouring an icon, especially fifty years on, is never easy, especially if it happens to be Gérald Genta's Ingenieur design. IWC presents a brushed silver tribute to legendary artist and designer Gérald Genta's genius with two limited editions. Fifty years ago, IWC Schaffhausen unveiled a watch that would eventually define the look and character of the Ingenieur collection: the Ingenieur SL, Reference 1832. The contemporary Ingenieur reinterprets its iconic design with refined brushed silver-plated dials, inspired by a rare variant of the Ingenieur SL; the dials also carry subtly reimagined logos to mark this milestone.

However, despite its forward-looking design narrative, the Ingenieur SL was not a commercial success when first launched. It took decades for collectors to rediscover the watch, during which time only 598 pieces were made. Today, it ranks among the most sought-after models in IWC's storied history.

The two limited editions celebrating the anniversary of Genta's emblematic design are available in 40 and 35 millimeters. The Ingenieur Automatic 40 50th Anniversary (Ref. IW328910) and the Ingenieur Automatic 35 50th Anniversary (Ref. I W324909) are each limited to 1,150 pieces. On both anniversary editions, the dials are complemented with rhodium-plated hands and metal hour markers, filled with Super-LumiNova®. A subtle design modification has been made to the logo, where the characteristic lightning bolt, usually found below the "Ingenieur" name on the dial, has been replaced with the number "50" to commemorate the anniversary of the Ingenieur SL. Here's to the next 50 years of fabulous form meeting flawless function. It's a date!
