

Cinnamon Bazaar

Your fill of Indian street-food nostalgia to make you go, "Another pani-puri please".

Cinnamon Bazaar makes picking what to order a nightmare, but for good reason. Its Covent Garden menu is full of dishes that are difficult to ignore: dabeli, chaat, Indore-style potato cakes, Kolkata-style jackfruit curry and lamb rogan josh shepherd's pie. Yes, that last one is a real thing—and it may be the neatest expression of the restaurant's comfort-food appeal: a British classic carrying the rich, warming logic of an Indian curry. The cooking draws from bazaars across India, but the menu keeps jumping between street-food favourites, regional classics and unexpected combinations.
