

Clockwise from top left: Room interiors are a nod to African & colonial influences; Presidential villa with a private pool; The Lighthouse specialises in dry-aged meats; Dinner under the sky with views of the Indian ocean; Rib Eye with soy yuzu sesame glaze land-to-guest ratio ensures that you can cycle the entire 14km perimeter without encountering another human being! This geographical isolation has turned the island into a vault for high-profile guests. Because the island is surrounded by deep-water trenches and protected reefs, it is naturally shielded from the paparazzi culture popular in the Mediterranean or even in the Caribbean.

The Art of Bespoke

At the Four Seasons, the 'castaway' life is a highly curated one. All the villas are tucked behind a veil of tropical bushes and angled in such a way that the only neighbour in sight is the Indian Ocean. The interiors lean into a restrained aesthetic, pairing dark wood and African artifacts with private plunge pools and outdoor showers. While buggies are on