

THROUGH THE AGES Works by (L-R) Alicja Kwade, Remen Chopra W. Van der Vaart and Basist Kumar

ART ▼

EVOLUTION OF THE GALLERY

An exhibition at Nature Morte's new gallery in Delhi's Gulmohar Park explores how contemporary artists negotiate globalisation

Nature Morte, one of India's pioneering contemporary art galleries, is marking its 30th anniversary with the opening of a new permanent home in New Delhi's Gulmohar Park. The gallery's new space, occupying an entire building across two floors and a rooftop terrace, opened on August 23 with The Evolution of the Soothsayer, a two-part exhibition bringing together 35 artists from across its three-decade history.

The inaugural exhibition unites artists who have been associated with the gallery for periods ranging from three decades ago to more recent additions to its programme. Curated by Peter Nagy, The Evolution of the Soothsayer explores how the position of the contemporary artist has changed amid globalisation, identity politics, relational aesthetics and successive digital revolutions. Across the exhibition's two chapters, artists work in a wide range of media, from painting and sculpture to unconventional materials and digital technologies.

Aparajita Jain, director of Nature Morte, describes the new address as an opportunity to "reintroduce the gallery through the artists and ideas that have shaped its programme over the years", while creating space for new conversations. She says the exhibition reflects the "spirit of experimentation, intellectual curiosity and independent thinking" that has defined Nature Morte.

The exhibition unites artists WHO HAVE BEEN WORKING WITH THE GALLERY for the past 30 years

For Nagy, the new location also represents a return to familiar territory. "Opening this new space feels like a homecoming for Nature Morte," he says, recalling the gallery's earlier years in nearby Neeti Bagh. After the intervening period at Dhan Mill, he sees the new gallery as a space for the next stage of its development, describing it as somewhere the gallery can "truly build the next 20 years around". ■

—Nikhil Sardana

Part one goes on till Oct. 10, part two from Oct. 17 to Dec. 12

ART ▼

Reading Between the Lines

RARE WORKS COME TOGETHER FOR THE FIRST TIME AT MAP, BENGALURU, DEPICTING 15 CENTURIES OF INDIAN VISUAL STORYTELLING

What happens when a temple frieze, a painted scroll, Chacha Chaudhary, Amar Chitra Katha, graphic novels and AI-generated images become part of the same storytelling journey? The Museum of Art & Photography

ART ▼

STREET SMART

PACKING A PUNCH Guesswho's 'Fighter's Love'