OBJECTS OF DESIRE

FOOD & DRINK

GREEN GRAZING

Exploring the quiet evolution of Zurich's vegan table with a spotlight on three restaurants that are rewriting conscience eating with precise tasting menus, Moroccan Spanish sharing plates and Catalan pintxos.

Rupali Dean

Yes, there exists a Zurich for vegan diners. No, there are many Zurichs for plant-based fine-dine, interspersed across restaurants of all personalities. There are evenings for intricate tasting menus, others for plates passed across a table with wine, and still others for an aperitif that unexpectedly becomes dinner. The city's plant-based scenario is not one cuisine or one mood. It's a melting pot, a melange, and, let's just say it, a subculture in the making.

Clockwise from top: Interiors at KLE; Vegan burger at Dar; a guest enjoying a drink at DAR; Chill zone at Dar; Chef Zizi Hattab in the kitchen; Dessert at KLE