

through small, intimate artisan workshops, every single piece remains fluid, open to customisation in dimension, finish, texture and shape. This allows Indian designers to co-author the final narrative. Ultimately, this Mumbai debut celebrates a shared cultural language. "We share the same passion for the richness and subtlety of materials, colours and craftsmanship," says Aumont.

Clearly, this Indian debut is less about introducing foreign furniture and more about celebrating a shared cultural language where French minimalist precision perfectly mirrors India's ancestral love for material depth and artisanal truth.

TOP PICKS
The range brings together furniture, lighting and objects that celebrate craftsmanship and contemporary living