

Cohesive Fluidity

Formal living and dining areas unfold as a cohesive, airy volume, grounded by cool grey marble floors and enveloped in warm beige clay-plastered walls. In the formal living room, a striking cluster of asymmetrical lights by Shailesh Rajput hovers above a composed, geometric seating arrangement, creating a moment of controlled drama. The informal living space offers a softer counterpoint, layered with refined lighting from Paul Matter and designed for a more relaxed, lived-in experience. The dining area is both sculptural and serene. Suspended above the table, the luminous Tree of Life installation by Klove Studio casts an ethereal glow, its delicate branching form echoing nature in abstraction. A feature wall adorned with handcrafted clay artwork introduces depth and texture, animated by abundant natural light. Throughout, vintage accessories and carefully curated, muted artworks lend a sense of quiet continuity, objects that feel collected rather than styled.

Celebrating the Handmade

Craft is central to Mitti Home's narrative. The project celebrates Indian artisanship at every level, collaborating with local makers and homegrown brands to create bespoke, handcrafted pieces that stand out gently within the restrained palette. From custom furniture to artisanal lighting and textural accents, each element carries the imprint of the hand, imbuing the home with authenticity and soul. Even the smaller utility zones receive this artistic attention. The powder room is conceived as an immersive jewel box, lined in soft green onyx that glows subtly under layered lighting. Large mirrors and vintage-inspired detailing elevate the space into something both intimate and indulgent.
