All the living spaces celebrate handmade designs, look cohesive and aesthetic, yet are utilitarian

Calm Brings Comfort

The master suite unfolds as a private retreat within the home. Reimagined and expanded, it is articulated as two interconnected zones: a quiet seating lounge framed by wicker-clad wardrobes and a restful sleeping space beyond. Sculptural lighting by Shailesh Rajput forms a striking installation behind the bed, doubling as both art and illumination. A study acts as a transitional buffer between the two spaces, reinforcing a sense of privacy and pause. The palette remains hushed and tonal, using sun-washed neutrals, oak and stone layered to evoke calm. The master bath continues this language of restraint, finished in muted travertine with a focus on texture, proportion and light to create a space that feels quietly spa-like and deeply restorative. The family room, more compact in scale, is designed with flexibility in mind. A pull-out bed integrates function without disrupting the visual calm, while a sculptural light from Hatsu introduces a refined focal point.

Tailored Expression

The son's bedroom brings in a more defined architectural edge, anchored in warm oak tones. A custom rotating television panel acts as a dynamic partition between the bed and seating areas, introducing an element of movement and adaptability. His bathroom contrasts this warmth with a richly textured grey terrazzo that is clean, contemporary, and tactile. The daughter's room is a study in softness and imperfection, guided by a Wabi-Sabi sensibility. An upholstered bed, layered natural textures and a serene palette create a restful environment, while a striking balcony framed in black arched openings adds a graphic, almost cinematic quality. Her bathroom is one of the home's most expressive spaces, entirely clad in clay plaster and centred around a sculptural travertine sunken tub, evoking an earthy, cocoon-like retreat. The guest bedroom is intentionally pared back, rendered in a palette of whites and cane to allow light, material, and craftsmanship to take precedence.

Mitti Home is a meditation on restraint, craft and conscious living—a home that embraces sustainability, celebrates the handmade and transforms structural limitation into quiet beauty. It is a space designed not just to be seen, but to be felt, where every surface, curve and object contributes to a deeper sense of calm and connection.
