Bright Idea

Illumination moves from basic fixture to immersive architecture at Abner's premier Experience Centre in Worli, Mumbai. Conceived to treat light as a spatial element rather than a mere object, the brand's debut gallery caters directly to India's design elite. Envisioned by designer Karan Desai, the space artfully layers warm terracotta curves, natural moss and recessed niches to showcase custom material-led families including Spanish alabaster, concrete and marble fixtures. Backed by a high-tech manufacturing base in Bhiwandi, the hub seamlessly unites technical customisation with premium European aesthetics.

Iron Clad

Global houseware heavyweight Tramontina is turning up the heat with Heritage Iron, a clever next-gen cookware range forged explicitly for Indian kitchens. Merging heirloom endurance with sleek modernity, this chemical-free collection features a 99 per cent iron alloy that seasons naturally over time, turning every frying pan, kadai and dosa tawa into a slick, non-stick ally. Designed to handle intense regional cooking, the lightweight silhouettes come equipped with cool-brushed stainless steel handles, toughened glass lids and a lifetime warranty.

Sacred Design

Prateek Jain and Gautam Seth transform glass into a distinctly modern heirloom. Their latest hand-blown glass sculpture celebrating Goddess Lakshmi under their label Collektklove is a case in point. Standing 16 inches tall, the piece uses a luminous palette of iridescent gold, amber, green and deep pink. It features a detailed temple-like crown, four stylised arms holding symbolic objects and a blooming lotus crest; melding ancient rituals and contemporary aesthetic with flair.
