Japanese Philosophy Meets Modern Bathrooms, Duravit Launces Bento Starck Box

Bureau Report

Duravit, a leading German bathroom solutions brand, has collaborated with renowned designer Philippe Starck to introduce the Bento Starck Box collection in India. Inspired by the traditional Japanese bento box, this high-end series brings organised order, intelligent zoning and sophisticated structure to modern luxury bathrooms.

Intelligent Zoning and Materials

The collection stands out for its clever division of wet and dry areas. The single sinks, crafted from Duravit's innovative DuraCeram® material, are available in glossy white and elegant White Satin matt finishes. For larger spaces, the double washbasins are made from the velvety matt mineral material DuroCast®. A matching, non-closable overflow valve integrates seamlessly into the basins, while inner-basin faucet installation eliminates messy, wet outer surfaces.

Spa-Like Luxury at Home

A major highlight of the series is the freestanding Infinity Bathtub made of premium acrylic. Designed for a spa-like experience, it is deep enough for two people and features a gently rounded head shelf. An innovative, bevelled water channel surrounds the tub, preventing water spillage and doubling as a practical storage shelf for bathing accessories.

Unified Design Aesthetic

To complete the cohesive architectural look, the collection includes matching toilets and bidets in both wall-mounted and floor-standing variants. These units feature advanced Duravit Rimless® and HygieneFlush technologies. The toilet seats come with a silent slow-close function and push-button removal for effortless cleaning, effortlessly blending everyday convenience with high design.
